SINGLE ELECTORAL REGISTER FIRST TIME IN SERBIA SINCE THE INTRODUCTION OF THE MULTI-PARTY SYSTEM

Single electoral register as an electronic database was used for the first time in recent elections. The introduction of the single electoral register has brought about many benefits for citizens.

Inter alia, it enabled the citizens to choose where to vote in parliamentary elections to avoid traveling to their place of residence, by submitting a request thereabout within the statutory deadline to the city/municipal administration in the territory where they desired to vote.

The citizens were also able to check and verify their polling station via the Internet portal of the Ministry or SMS message.

Protection of personal information because of the changed nature of viewing the electoral register was also ensured.

The electoral register will be updated automatically in conjunction with electronic registers the Ministry has been developing since 2009. The procedure will be specified and more efficient exchange of information (by modern technology) enabled between the authorities maintaining official citizens 'records required for the electoral register update. ■

PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION REFORM
Ministry for Human and Minority Rights,
Public Administration and Local Self-Government

THREE QUESTIONS – THREE ANSWERS

Our interlocutor – Zoran Petrović, director – chief administrative inspector at the Administrative Inspectorate at the Ministry for Human and Minority Rights, Public Administration and Local Self-Government

1. What has been done in so far to institute the single electoral register?

Single electoral register was instituted by the Ministry for Human and Minority Rights, Public Administration and Local Self-Government for the first time after 20 years following the introduction of the multi-party system in the Republic of Serbia.

The onset of implementation of the Law on the Single Electoral Register (24 December 2010) laid down conditions for the single voters' database formation by data take-over from the electoral registers independently maintained by local self-government units.

Following the voters' information take-over from the local self-government units (in May and November 2010), the Ministry examined electoral registers in accordance with its statutory competences and authorities and undertook necessary measures to ensure their mutual compatibility, accuracy and strict adherence to all set standards for personal data protection. Based on information submitted by the Ministry and that obtained through the regular procedure of information updating, during this period local self-government units (until 10 May 2012) passed over 420,000 decisions on amending the single electoral register, such as: registering voters not previously registered (in most cases based on attaining the age of maturity and registration of residence), deleting voters (usually based on death and loss of eligibility), plus a significant number of amendments, modifications or corrections of the existing information (inserting date and place of birth, name of one parent, deleting double registrations, inserting missing or correcting incorrect personal identification numbers, etc.).

2. What was the cooperation with city and municipal administrations like?

Owing to the involvement of municipal and city administrations and exceptional cooperation between the Ministry and the aforementioned bodies, significant amount of information was updated in a relatively short period of time compared to the workload.

As of March 2012, citizens were given the opportunity to verify their respective information by sending a free SMS messages or visiting the public portal of the Ministry and entering their personal identification number and in that way check whether they were entered in the electoral register and what their polling station was. Around 500,000 citizens exercised this right conclusive with May 2012 which largely contributed to the updating of data.

When the elections at all levels were announced in the Republic of Serbia mid-March 2012, the single electoral register system was ready to be used after barely a three-month implementation of the Law on the Single Electoral Register, and was used in the electoral process for electing the President of the Republic, MPs of the National Assembly of the Republic of Serbia, members of the AP Vojvodina Assembly, and assembly members in towns, municipalities and city municipalities applying the proportional and majority electoral system, as well as in the referenda in a number of municipalities.

The assessment undertaken after the elections demonstrated that the electoral register was successfully tested in practice and served its purpose in the electoral process implementation.

3. What is still left to be done?

Regardless of the fact that Serbia previously did not have such a precise and accurate electoral register protected from any kind of abuse as it does today, this system will still have to be further improved and developed.

Administrative Inspectorate will continue to play an important role in this process, through administrative inspectors who will, same as during its introduction, closely cooperate with municipal and city administrations and undertake necessary measures and activities to further update all the data required for an accurate and precise register of voters.

RESEARCH ON AWARENESS OF EMPLOYEES IN LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT UNITS ON COMPETENCES OF THE MINISTRY – SECOND ROUND

The research was conducted from 8 to 29 March 2012 using an online method and a sample of 495 respondents consisting of managers and employees in city and municipal administrations throughout Serbia. The second out of three rounds, conducted under the "Municipal Support Programme IPA 2007 – Good Local Governance, Planning and Service Delivery" project was aimed at determining the changes in terms of awareness of employees in city and municipal administrations about the role, current and planned initiatives of the Ministry for Human and Minority Rights, Public Administration and Local Self-Government in comparison with the results of the first round of research conducted a year ago.

Results showed that the role and competences of the Ministry are generally recognized given that 96% of employees and managers in city and municipal administration are familiar with the public administration tasks the Ministry of Human and Minority Rights, Public Administration and Local Self-Government is responsible for, which is not a significant change compared to the previous round of research.

The research findings also showed that employees and managers in city and municipal administrations are well aware about the current initiatives of the Ministry, such as the inroduction of the Single Electoral Register (84%), institution of the central system for processing and keeping a second copy of the registers (61%) and communal police (58%). As it was expected, the focus has shifted from initiatives that were related to the communal police, inclusion of Roma, minority rights and the like that were central in the previous round of research to initiatives related to electoral registers, public administration reform, and so on.

The efforts of the Ministry in so far in terms of informing employees in city and municipal administrations about the activities and initiatives thereof were generally recognized and positively evaluated. 59% of employees and managers in city and municipal administrations considered to be better informed about the activities and initiatives of the Ministry because of the efforts of the Ministry regarding this issue. Those that were generally better informed about the activities and initiatives of the Ministry, as well as those who read the "Reformator" were significantly more likely than others to positively assess the efforts put forth by the Ministry in terms of raising the awareness of employees in city and municipal administrations.
